BY NEIL SIMON

- Directed by Brian Brooks
- Roles for 7 males, 2 females
- Come prepared to read scenes from the script
- Show dates are Apr. 24-26 & May 1-3

ROLES

Ira Stone, male, 35-43, all ethnicities: hypochondriac who comes in late every day with a new ailment; his humor is wrapped around despair.

Carol Wyman, female, 34-37, all ethnicities: the only woman writer on the show; has a strong and quick defense system.

Helen, female, 20-29, all ethnicities: Max's female secretary, attractive in a quirky way; completely out of her element in the writer's room.

Brian Doyle, male, 35-45, all ethnicities: an Irish-American with a biting sense of humor and acerbic outlook on life; heavy smoker, heavy cougher, heavy drinker.

Kenny Franks, male, 34-37, all ethnicities: considered the 'boy genius' of the group but also the most sophisticated writer.

Milt Fields, male, 40-47, all ethnicities: flamboyant 'gag' man; a joke a minute wholesaler who deals in fast-paced patter.

Val Slotsky, male, 44-47, all ethnicities: senior member of the staff; the most politically aware of all the writers; a Russian immigrant, he should still carry a strong accent.

Max Prince, male, 40-59, all ethnicities: a bigger-than-life comic actor who is the mega-star of a hugely popular TV variety show; can't help but dominate a room entirely.

Lucas Brickman, male, 20-39, all ethnicities: the freshman writer; sensible and sincere.
